ARRIVAL OF THE CANADA—TWO WEEKS.

The Cunard steamship Canada arrived at Boston about midnight last night. We anticipated this arrival in our foreign journals.

It is stated that the potato crop in Ireland was very bad, the returns not being more than half of what, in the opposite quality of the new crop over that of last year were largely under amounts for the decrease in bulk. The disease is not so disastrous as was expected.

The political news by this arrival is wholly unimportant.

GREAT FINANCIAL EMBARRASSMENT.

EUROPEAN MONEY MARKETS.

From the London Times, (City Article,) Oct. 23.

There was rather more demand for Government Securities, and the rate was from 5 to 5¼ P cent. Bank Stock experienced a fall, the last price being 215 to 217. Exchequer Bills were tolerably steady to £10,000 stock being transferred, of which £3,000 was taken at 2d, the market generally of the market causing difficulty in the small operations. There were no gold withdrawals from the bank to-day, but it was understood that about 11,000 sovereigns would be taken at Liverpool for shipment to New-York by the Canada. Were the other amounts previously provided it seems probable therefore, that the drain to be distinguished by the Canada will not fall short of the anticipated total of about £500,000. The Canada will take out the Mint sovereigns, which have been coined, the shilling due before August, 1856. The instalments will consist of 25 P cent, commencing on the 1st of January, and three of 25 P cent, at succeeding intervals of two months.

The rate of discount at Hamburg has declined to 5½ P cent.

Some parties have additional policies of insurance on specie or bullion by the next mail were opened at Lloyd's today, but whether they will be acted upon will doubtless depend on the telegraphic advices daily expected.

It is stated that the failure of Cyrus Field, & Co., at New-York, has contained the suspension of the respectable firm of Mr. Grinnell, Minturn & Co., of that City, and that their drafts on the resident partner in London were yesterday returned unpaid, the entirely a temporary embarrassment, the engagements are small, and it was expected the stoppage would be temporary only.

From the London News (City Article) Oct. 23.

We are enabled to state that the East India Company are about to make some large remittances of silver to India. We know that they have already effected insurances to the amount of at least £200,000. This will aggravate the drain of silver, and shows the poverty of the exchequer in India.

The French Government have decided upon rescinding the prohibition against the exportation of corn and flour from France. To this step they are impelled in consequence of strong remonstrances from the agricultural districts.

At St. Petersburg Exchange is 98 pence, which might to cause gold to flow freely to this side.

In Paris, on Friday, Funds closed 66 50 and 66 60.

RUN ON THE IRISH BANKS.

From the Public Correspondence of the London Times.

Letters from the town of Tipperary, published in the Clonmel Chronicle, state that there was a partial run on the Banks in the former place on Saturday, but it was only on market day that it was expected to blow over before the close of business hours. On Monday, however, the excitement on the Bank of Ireland and the National Bank, at both which offices gold was freely paid on demand. It was expected that the pressure would increase in the next few days, owing to the propagation of the rumors, and, on Tuesday evening, according to one of these accounts:

The running on paper gold is enormous, for deposits, in the end, amounts to 20 P cent, and the demand for gold is so great that it cannot be supplied to-day. At one time yesterday the excitement was so great, that the doors of the bank were closed, and the clerks counted out the money, and the excitement was so great that the gold was exhausted. When we write the last accounts, the gold was expected by the small farmers, who are the chief customers of the Bank, we are not aware that any serious inconvenience has yet been felt, or any disturbance, or even slight event in the money market in the Kingdom, and, although the Bank of Ireland stopped payment on Saturday, there is not the slightest uneasiness among the right classes of the community.

In the North, too, there was a slight pressure on two of the local banks, but the alarmed run was so promptly met that the matter is not noticed in some of the Belfast papers. The Northern News says:

"On Saturday afternoon, we understand, it was that there was a scene here in the Belfast Bank, and during the entire evening this office was beset by crowds of people anxious to learn the truth of the matter. On Monday, we understand, there was a slight attempt at a run, but it was a less affair, for the bank could have supplied the gold faster than any demand that could have been made upon it. On Tuesday, in Armagh, a similar alarm was made, but with a similar result, and the panic in a short time subsided. With regard to the Belfast Bank we can state without hesitation that, constituted as it is, the Bank of England is not later."

THE DRAIN OF GOLD FROM ENGLAND.

From the London News.

The question which every one now asks with extreme interest is, to what extent will the present extraordinary stringency of our money market check the drain to America? That the effect of gold rather will be stopped, it would be vain to expect. The pressure in the United States has assumed such proportions that the immediate object of each author is not to transact fresh business, but to strengthen his position and to weather the storm; and the same may be said of each monetary institution. LATE IMPORTATIONS.

The "Pre-Raphaelites" of old Italian and French Paintings in New-York.

"Friends, thou art virtuous," cries the indignant Sir Toby, "shall there be no more cakes and ale?"

Because we have all been wearied by a panic and crushed by a pressure, shall there be no more pictures in the world, and no more pleasure taken in them? On the contrary! if Art is what the lovers of it declare it to be, and what we believe it, clearly there was never a time when its humanizing and renovating influences were more sharply needed than they now are; and of all the people in the world, we New-Yorkers should be the warmest in our welcome of Ursula and her glorious train. All the world we know is out of the mists. One of our Richmond correspondents, the humorous GRAHAME MACRAE, for his footbridge in crossing the Atlantic just at this moment, to count with his rout of a "Good Time Coming." And he tells us that if the English and French artists who have adventured on many of their creations upon the treacherous sea for our delectation and instruction, could look under the eye of the office-keeper yonder, he would rate them soundly for their impudence in asking us to walk in to see them. Perhaps, if our world of protested notes and protested bonds, into our sine-qualm of this dreary, dreary Panic, turn to hunt in, we shall be able to speak of them as if they had done so.

We have published of art, properly so called, in this city, two [illegible]. Our artists are the Alsatia members of [illegible] and no collection has gone since on a distinct exemption of a great [illegible]. The Dusseldorfers alone have been [illegible] among us for several years, in a gallery which has not yet deserted us, though we have well nigh deserted it.

Although these artists belong by their intellectual pedigree rather to Holland than to Germany, and although to accept their works as types of German art in the age of CORNELIUS and KAULBACH and OVERBECK, would be deeply absurd, still they constitute one province of a great kingdom, and have a physiognomy of their own which, if it be not very noble or lovely, is at least, their own. It was only in the Dusseldorf Gallery that any unprejudiced artists could gather some positive notion of the meaning of the phrase a "School of Art," while the people in general were learning what to like in pictures, and why to like it. But both artists and people in general have now an ample [illegible] from the premises and the prospect of an indefinite expansion through all future time. An association of amateurs and of artists in England has undertaken to open and to keep open a channel of communication between the artistic production of the old world and the artistic production of the new.

The time has come, that is, when pictures and statues, like books, music, engravings, take the circulation of the world's life. LAMPERTIUS and ROSA BONHEUR, MACLISE and COPPER, STANFIELD and GUDIN, are to follow where TURNER and FRAGONARD, DE BALZAC and LAMARTINE, DICKENS and THACKERAY, VERDI and MEYERBEER have led. It is not easy to overrate the importance of such a revolution. In the aesthetic history of our people, but as it would be very easy to utter a great deal of extravagant nonsense (figurative), we shall not dwell upon any possible future just at this moment. Suffice it that the persons who have put their hands to the work are both able and determined to carry it through, and that we must accept their present performance simply as a proclamation, and not at all as a fulfillment of their project. They mean to make us acquainted with the leading schools of European art; to stimulate thereby at once our curiosity and our patronage; to kindle in the popular mind a warmer love, and to illuminate the popular brain with a clearer knowledge of painting and of pictures.

To this end, desirable and they have now taken the essential first step. They have gathered together as many good pictures as were disposable for their purpose in London and in Paris, and forming them into two groups, have set them before us—the British in the new rooms of the Academy of Design, the French in the old saloon of the Art Union. The fortune of Punch, we are sorry to say, has not been more favorable on this occasion to our English cousins than was the fortune of War in the Crimea. The Manchester Exhibition and the private collection transferred sadly on the other side with the designs of the association, and circumstances of difficulties appear to have abundant the array of their treasure upon this. Many of the best names in English Art are wholly unrepresented in the catalogue of the collection, while of the artists exhibit, but few are fairly presented to the public whose acquaintance they are now to make. The rooms of the Academy are awkwardly arranged, and are just about as fit for the display of pictures as is the Academy of Music for the performance of operas. Moreover, the paintings are disposed after a strange, incoherent fashion, which dazzles the eye as you enter, and leaves the brain bewildered when you go out. They are "hung" without respect to GREVEUEIL, or the laws of color—Pre-Raphaelite intensities "killing" naturalist composure, and fragrant oils literally burning the life out of quiet asphaltes.

The only section of the English School, too, which is prominently put forward in a way to convey something like an adequate idea of its qualities is the fantastic little knot of the pensive Pre-Raphaelites, and even of these we have not an absolutely satisfactory deputation. Neither MILLAIS nor HUNTS are here, nor more than five or six of the fabled twenty-two, who held their "chapel" in Finsbury in the days of June. Still we have quite Pre-Raphaelites enough among us, and if we cannot measure their highest aspirations in HOLMAN HUNT's "Light of the World," or MADOX BROWN's "King Lear," we can at least touch their lowest dregs in the "Mother's Grave," the "Pale Reformer," and "Clerk Saunders."

Possibly a better thing could not have been done, both for the interests of British Art and for the Pre-Raphaelites themselves, then to give them the unlucky prominence place which they occupy in the present exhibition. For if anything can make the clever but eccentric adepts of this Bloomsian coterie understand the enormity of the absurdities on which they are wasting their talents, their utter failure to touch the sympathies of a people almost entirely new to the appeals of art, almost as ignorantly fresh, in fact, as were the Italians of the early Pre-Raphaelite period, ought to do so. The Pre-Raphaelites undertake to revive the traditions of the time "when art was still religion." They wish to make a penance of every picture, and of every penance at once a spiritual pleasure and a spiritual profit. Because the painters who tried to paint before MASSACCIO and PERUGINO, and GHIRLANDAJO, LEONARDO and RAPHAEL, succeeded in painting, naturally devoted their energies to the details which they could master, rather than to the broad effects of which they had not achieved the secret, and because these same painters put themselves to the infinite pains they did, out of their passionate love for their art—therefore, argue the modern Pre-Raphaelites, no man can possibly cherish a passionate love of his art, unless he abdicates all the facilities of subsequent experience, and all the principles acknowledged and proved, and goes back to the technic processes and the minute details of the "Ages of Faith." This logic is bad enough, but the practical results are still worse. Conceived by men of genius (the Pre-Raphaelite theory has been adopted by various [illegible]), it would necessarily painting on all the results of [illegible] like of straw, old glass, lance-rails and [illegible] that can be found in Great Britain, [illegible] of misguided tenderness for the "neglected truths of Nature," and contempt for sentimental fellows like CLAUDE LE LORRAINE and EDWIN LANDSEER. Some of these interesting fanatics are further afflicted with retinitis and [illegible] which they indulge in the representation of the most [illegible] medieval anatomy, and the most intensely [illegible] symbolism. In a word those of them who have nothing to say keep repeating the letters of the alphabet in an oracular manner, while those of them who have something to say make up by saying that something in the Norman-French of the PLANTAGENETS, instead of the improved English of Her Most Gracious Majesty VICTORIA.

This is the aim of Pre-Raphaelitism as a speciality. For the more fidelity in the study of nature, of which they speak as if it were their monopoly, belongs to a dozen other sections of the World of Art as truly as to themselves. Without going back to MEMMI and MASSY and TRADUCCI, who would be but names to most of our readers, we have only to refer to the French Exhibition in Broadway for fifty examples of truth of detail, not to be surpassed by the indefatigable HUNT or the incoherent MILLAIS, and not to be equalled by most of their followers.

It is on the strength of this truth of detail alone that the Pre-Raphaelites can claim as their own Mr. WIRGUS' capital picture of "Middlemass' Meeting his Parents," which (No. 165) is one of the most thoughtful of the paintings in the English Exhibition. For Mr. WIRGUS' picture is positively painted with so little "earnestness" that he has neglected to deprive Middlemass of his umbrella, and has pandered to the popular eye by obeying the laws of perspective. That in doing these things he has outraged the sanctities of the Pre-Raphaelite faith any man can see at a glance by turning to "Fair Rosamond" under her "pleached bower," or to the mildewed boy who lies upon his "Mother's Grave," a miracle of misery and of white mushrooms, while a little lamb skips along, a most pathetic symbol of orphan age, through the air, or rather through the space that should be air, and at some considerable distance above the level of the pea-green turf. How much real power has been thrown away upon the puerile cant of this imaginary "new school," we have evidence enough in the King Lear of MADOX BROWN, and in the Light of the World of HOLMAN HUNT. In the latter of these pictures one knows not which most to admire, the splendor of the tones, which is not unworthy of DELACROIX, the elaborate elegance of the execution, which MEISSONIER has hardly surpassed, or the delicacy and tenderness of the sentiment, which would have moved the heart of ALBERT DURER, and which attains what ARY SCHEFFER has all his life been trying, and in vain, to comprehend. This is one of the few Pre-Raphaelite pictures in which the artist and his "elevated motives" do not immediately obtrude themselves between the spectator and the canvas; it is, of course, a piece of mere mystical symbolism, but it has all the interest of true poetry. So, too, has the "King Lear" of MADOX BROWN, although the preposterous tricks of the school are more offensively prominent in this picture. The Cordelia is studied not after SHAKESPEARE, but after the "nature" of the ancient Britons, and she is consequently a slightly coarse and repulsively vehement person, while Lear is a mere huddle of white flakes. The perspective, too, is atrociously bad, and the lights throughout the picture dismally theatrical. But there is a positive wealth of feeling and of fancy in the countenances of the group brought out of the tragedy to symbolize the story.

When we quit the Pre-Raphaelite conventicle for the Catholic cathedral of English art we begin to lose our temper. For, knowing as we well know how rich the English ateliers and galleries are, we own ourselves provoked into an unconventional mood of mind by the inadequacy of the contributions sent to us, and by the ignorance or carelessness which has suffered what we have to be so unworthily set before us.

The broad lights of the Hall are thrown upon a crude and criard composition of MACLISE's, and an oak which Mr. ANTHONY must have found in the forests of Cockaigne. An excellent picture by LUCY, "The parting of Lord and Lady William Russell," (105) is vexatiously hung opposite to a frantic and cadaverous "disfigurement" of "Romeo and Juliet," the false sentiment and odious coloring of which almost incapacitate one for properly appreciating the gravity, simplicity, strength and unfeigned pathos of the other composition. As a fine specimen of a class of work, on which our American artists have not yet adventured with much success, this painting of LUCY's nevertheless deserves particular attention and study. There is decided merit, too, in a large picture by G. H. THOMAS, of GARIBALDI at Rome, (151.) The ensemble of the battle scene recalls the vivid canvases of H. VERNET, and especially in the group about the General there is a rare warmth of tone and truth of sentiment, as well as an unaffected fidelity of "local coloring." A few small aquarelles by TURNER will reward the attention they cannot fail to receive, provided the anxious spectator does not turn away too suddenly, in his disgust at finding them so little like his anticipations of the Turneresque turmoil and whirl of colors. He must remember that he has seen TURNER only through the glasses of RUSKIN, and looking at him for himself, he may learn a thing or two in regard to the critic as well as the artist.

No. 116, a Coast Scene, is particularly fine—the roll and movement, as well as the light and hue of the waves, and the aerial perspective, write the master's name as visibly on those few inches of paper as it could be impressed upon the wall which TINTORETTO covered with his Paradise. Mr. J. M. D'EUVIELLE, too, contributes some lovely views of Venice, full of feeling, and handled with infinite taste and grace. Then there are some lady-like imitations of the lady-like UWINS, by Mr. CONSOUIN, altogether worthy to be commended to the makers of Annuals, and a number of clever specimens of that skill in zoology and in horticulture which is not uncommon among the English artists. There are peaches and oranges fit to be looked at, while real peaches and oranges are eaten; there are ducks and hens of much virtue, and various dogs, one of whom vindicates the sagacity of his race by looking at the preternatural legs of "Clerk Saunders," just over the way, with a misty expression, compounded of sorrow and of wrath.

There is a fine squarelle of J. D. HARDING, (91,) which, although "kilt entirely" by being badly hung, is well worth an attempt to do it justice; and there is a head entitled "Cinderella in her coal-carrying days," which, if it was not sent to us as a quiz for the purpose of "planting" the Yankees, is certainly the most sublimely absurd device ever invented by man. In short there are objects enough of interest or of diversion exhibited at the English Rooms to occupy several visits very pleasantly and profitably. But our reader must never forget that we should render ourselves liable to an indictment for libel if we spoke of this exhibition as an exposition of the "English school," and that we do not pretend for a moment to institute any comparison between it and the French Exhibition at the Art Union rooms, which is really a very fair presentation of the most successful and brilliant school of modern art, and which everybody ought to endeavor to see at least twice in a week till the first of December, at which time it with the English exhibition will positively be taken back to Europe.

While offering for the moment the particular notice which this admirable Gallery so richly deserves, we cannot forbear to say that the most student amateur will surely forget in five minutes at the Art-Union Rooms all the vexations and disappointments which he can possibly have experienced at the Academy. The one MEISSONIER, the one GUDIN, ROSA BONHEUR's three "stots," and any one of the five PAUMES there exhibited would make of themselves a Gallery and beget a fever among the connoisseurs.

The Close of the Fair at the Crystal Palace.

The Fair of the American Institute at the Crystal Palace closed last night with the announcement of the premiums awarded by the several Committees. The Fair opened on the 24th of September, and it has been, in all respects, a success. Though the remarkably bad weather and the panic have operated very unfavorably, the Management have no reason to complain of the position in which they find their treasury on balancing accounts. From the value of the exhibition the toughness of the times has, indeed, somewhat detracted, since many who entered their articles, considering how scarce money was, and how prostrated every department of business, have neglected to keep an exhibitor at the Palace, to point out what was low or valuable in their invention. So the visitor was obliged to pass by very many things only guessing at their use or pestering them old, which daily deserved notice. Those exhibitors who have attended to their business, however, have generally found it to pay,—one manufacturer told us that he had taken more orders during the month past, principally from strangers in the City, than he had obtained in all the rest of the year. Of the department of agricultural implements we have scarcely spoken—never having succeeded in catching an exhibitor during all our frequent visits; yet every farmer and his wife first visited that part of the palace were the ploughs and harrows, reapers and cultivators stood. At just this time of year, City house-keepers naturally went first into the quarter where the large assortment of ranges, furnaces and stoves is set out. Yet it cost us three visits to find the first man who was prepared to show why his furnace was not just such a gas-leaking, incendiary, fuel-wasting nuisance as the one that so largely contributes toward making our brown-stone front a means of grace.

CHILSON'S Cone furnace is still a new device. Its peculiarity is its broad-topped fire-pot, lined with soapstone or iron staves, which make this part of it gas-tight, surmounted with a cluster of hollow iron cones or tapering radiators, each of which terminates by a small opening in a cast-iron ring, itself a powerful radiator. The claim is that the smoke and gases are consumed either in the cones which, from their shape and proximity to the fire, are exceedingly hot, or in the cast-iron ring above, so that very little is left to pass off in the smoke-pipe,—a great saving of fuel certainly if the thing works as well as it promises.

BARTLETT & LESLEY's furnace was patented in 1855. Its construction is such that the fire has to travel from three to five times further than in the common furnace—thus wasting little of the heat and diminishing the danger of fire. The cold air is made to travel over a hot surface correspondingly long, and, moreover, passes through the furnace not in one body but divided into their layers. Dispensing with damper-openings and downward drafts, the gas is carried off and the air of the room left pure.

Of stoves we saw but one that was new,—PIERCE'S, (of Troy,) designed to burn bituminous coal. The country abounds with bituminous coal, but men who come from the regions where it is most abundant, freely say that it cannot be burned in any stove; it so soon clogs all the flues and stuffs the chambers with soot. PIERCE aims to obviate the difficulty by making no flues at all, and heating his oven by means of hot air. There is no bottom grate, but the fire-box has a solid iron plate for its bottom and back, (which is lined of course with fire-brick,) set at such an angle to the front grating that the fuel, whether coal or wood, is fed continually to the lower front opening where it is kindled. The flame passes directly over the oven to the pipe or chimney. From the back part of the stove, and underneath, the cold air enters, passing over the oven, down just behind the fire-box, under the oven, up and over it again, till it is discharged in jets just where the flame of the burning fuel was cooling into smoke. Thus the air, passing in a direction different to that of the main draft, is warmed every inch of its progress, receiving its greatest supply of heat directly from the solid back and bottom of the fire-box, and is discharged at the throat, where only fresh oxygen was needed to re-ignite the smoke of the exhausted flame. The theory seems to be perfect; whether its practice with the true bituminous coal would be equally successful we cannot say. But on Thursday a trial was made with it upon a semi-anthracite of which a specimen is on exhibition—the Tiverton coal. This coal burns with a flame much like the bituminous, but, from its lack of sulphur and iron, never clinkers but slacks down on burning. The experiment was entirely satisfactory,—the weight of the coal feeding the fire and pressing out its ashes seasonably, the oven being brought early to a baking heat, and the smoke seeming to be entirely consumed before reaching the pipe.

For lighting houses there are several sorts of oil exhibited. Of improvements for gas burning we found but one that promised much. "BATCHELDER's anti-flickering gas-burner" attains its object by means of a circle of minute jets of flame around the light. These create an ascending current that shield it from the cool current as effectually as the glass chimney of the common argand lamp.

How to take a sleigh-ride without freezing seems to have been discovered in Mr. JOHN W. LEYPEAR's simple method for warming carriages. His device is substantially an alcohol lamp, set in an iron box underneath the carriage body. A plate of iron over the flame distributes the heat, which finds access to the feet of the merry riders through still another,—a perforated iron plate. There is no possibility of anything being set on fire, and we can see no reason why it should not make a sleigh-ride, with a very pretty companion, quite a tolerable entertainment on a crisp moonlight January night.

Dr. NEW, of Yorkville, exhibits a "safety stirrup." When the rider of an unmanageable horse is thrown from his saddle, his foot pressing upon a spring releases the strap from the stirrup and lets the rider loose. No position that the rider can assume when sitting in his saddle can detach the stirrup; but no dragging force can be applied to it while his foot is still there that will not disengage it.

There are some fine specimens of copper and lead ore exhibited in not a large collection of minerals. FISHER, BIRD & Co. show beautiful specimens of a dark mahogany-colored marble from California. Mr. H. CORY, of St. Louis, shows a fine but less lively-colored specimen of the Ozark marble. Otherwise, there are few marbles except the old sculptured ones, which are as familiar as the interior of the Palace itself. In a large tank of water one of the floor-clerks experiments with BURKLE's Life-Preserving chairs. When "blown up" he submerges it with difficulty, showing how hard it would be for one to drown if buttoned up with such an envelope. It [illegible] with a pin [illegible] water, and you lose the buoyancy of its occupant. But simply by pushing it together again the surface is [illegible] as safely as before. What is the secret operation in which the cotton cloth was boiled to make it so impenetrable to air, Mr. BURKLE does not tell us. There are many devices for making our beds more comfortable exhibited on this lower floor; some of them like FORD's admirable window-sash, combining what is desirable in both the folding and sliding sash, are quite sure to come soon into general use. But there are some which are not as useful as they are undoubtedly new. We observed a weather-strip safely patented which gets out of order in a season, and is more annoyance in a week than it does good in a year. There are several blind-adjusters and sash-fasteners, which possibly may be all right and very valuable, but in the models work all wrong. The women never about the washing machines, wondering whether they really are labor-savers, or as most of them prove, are merely devices requiring more labor to operate than to do without them. Mr. HOMERY C. BUNSON exhibits a feather-mattress, that seems the perfection of that luxury, the feathers being placed in separate compartments within the tick, and the whole ventilated by means of small tubes, set like eyelets in the mattress edge.

We have left to the last of this article the description of a machine which many hold to be one of the most valuable on exhibition—the Union Roller Gin. It is a very compact machine for ginning Sea Island cotton. It is formed of two rollers, twenty inches long, placed in contact, one above the other. The lower roller, of vulcanized rubber, is three inches in diameter, and gives motion to the upper roller, which is fluted, and made of polished steel, one inch and a quarter in diameter. In front of the rollers is an iron plate supported on centres below, extending up nearly to the line of contact of the rollers, terminating at the upper edge in a small bead or ledge, and has a rapid motion toward and from the bight of the rollers. The seed cotton is fed over a table, and is grasped between the rollers and thrown off behind by a revolving fan, while the seeds are retained in front and ripped out by the combined action of the vibrating-plate and the steel roller. The machine which has been in operation daily at the Palace, professes to deliver 300 pounds of ginned cotton in a day without crushing a seed. It can be worked by hand if preferred. It saves the expense and loss by drying, sunning and moting, and yields the fibre in unbroken and perfect condition. The inventor is sanguine that his machine will greatly increase the production of Sea Island Cotton, which is at present but 50,000 bags of 300 pounds each. Much of the territory suited to its growth is unoccupied for lack of a machine that will do for the fine Cottons what WHITNEY's Gin, when first introduced, did for the short staple.

FROM UTAH.

Capt. Van Vleit's Official Account of his Visit to Utah.

HAM'S FORK, Sept. 16, 1857.

CAPTAIN: I have the honor to report, for the information of the Commanding General, the result of my trip to the Territory of Utah.

In obedience to special instructions, dated Head quarters Army for Utah, Fort Leavenworth, July 28, 1857, I left Fort Leavenworth July 29, and reached Fort Kearney in nine days' travelling. Fort Laramie in ten, and Great Salt Lake City in thirty-three and a half. At Fort Kearney I was detained one day by the changes I had to make and by sickness, and at Fort Laramie three days, as all the animals were forty miles from the post, and when brought in all had to be shod before they could take the road. I traveled as rapidly as it was possible to do with six mule wagons. Several of my teams broke down, and at least half of my animals are unserviceable, and will remain so until they recruit. During my progress towards Utah I met many people from that Territory, and also several mountain men at Green River, and all informed me that I would not be allowed to enter Utah, and if I did, I would run great risk of losing my life. I treated all this, however, as idle talk; but it induced me to leave my wagons and escort at Ham's Fork, 148 miles this side of the city, and proceed alone.

I reached Great Salt Lake City without molestation, and immediately upon my arrival I informed Governor BRIGHAM YOUNG that I desired an interview, which he appointed for the next day. On the evening of the day of my arrival, Governor YOUNG, with many of the leading men of the city, called upon me at my quarters. The Governor received me most cordially, and treated me during my stay, which continued some six days, with the greatest hospitality and kindness. In this interview the Governor made known to me his views with regard to the approach of the United States troops in plain and unmistakeable language.

He stated that the Mormons had been persecuted, murdered and robbed in Missouri and Illinois, both by the mob and State authorities, and that now the United States were about to pursue the same course and that, therefore, he and the people of Utah had determined to resist all persecution at the commencement, and that the troops now on the march for Utah should not enter the Great Lake Valley. As he uttered these words, all those present concurred most heartily in what he said. The next day, as agreed upon, I called upon the Governor, and delivered in person the letters with which I had been entrusted.

In that interview, and in several subsequent ones, the same determination to resist to the death the entrance of the troops into the Valley was expressed by Governor YOUNG and those about him. The Governor informed me that there was abundance of everything I required for the troops, such as lumber, forage, &c., but that none would be sold to us.

In the course of my conversation with the Governor and the influential men in the Territory, I told them plainly and frankly what I conceived would be the result of their present course. I told them that they might prevent the small military force now approaching Utah from getting through the narrow defiles and rugged passes of the mountains this year, but that next season the United States Government would send troops sufficient to overcome all opposition. The answer to this was invariably the same—"We are aware that such will be the case, but when those troops arrive they will find Utah a desert; every house will be burned to the ground, every tree cut down, and every field laid waste. We have three years' provisions on hand, which we will 'cache,' and then take to the mountains and bid defiance to the powers of the Government." I attended their service on Sunday, and in course of a sermon delivered by Elder TAYLOR, he referred to the approach of the troops, and declared that they should not enter the Territory. He then referred to the probability of an overpowering force being sent against them, and desired all persons who would apply the torch to their own buildings, cut down their trees, and lay waste their fields, to hold up their hands; every hand in an audience of 4,000 persons was raised at the same moment. During my stay in the city I visited several families, and all with whom I was thrown looked upon the present movement of the troops towards their Territory as the commencement of another religious persecution, and expressed a fixed determination to sustain Governor YOUNG in any measure he might adopt.

From all these facts I am forced to the conclusion that Governor YOUNG and the people of Utah will prevent, if possible, the army of Utah from entering their Territory this season. This, in my opinion, will not be a very difficult task, owing to the lateness of the season, the smallness of our force, and the defences that nature has thrown around the Valley of the Great Salt Lake. There is but one road running into the valley on the side which our troops are approaching, and for over fifty miles it passes through narrow canons over rugged mountains, which a small force could hold against great odds. I am inclined, however, to believe that the Mormons will not resort to actual hostilities until the last moment. Their plan of operations will be to burn the grass, cut up the roads, and stampede the animals, so as to delay the troops until snow commences to fall, which will render the roads impassable. Snow falls early in this region; in fact, last night it commenced falling at Fort Bridger, and this morning the surrounding mountains are clothed in white. Were it one month earlier in the season, I believe the troops could force their way in, and they may be able to do so even now; but the attempt will be fraught with considerable danger, arising from the filling up of the canons and passes with snow. I do not wish it to be considered that I am advocating either the one course or the other. I simply wish to lay the facts before the General, leaving it to his better judgment to decide upon the proper movements. Notwithstanding my inability to make the purchase I was ordered to, and all that Governor YOUNG said in regard to opposing the entrance of the troops into the valley, examined the country in the vicinity of the city, with a view of selecting a place for a military site. I visited the [illegible] but found it, in my opinion, entirely unsuitable for a military station. It is [illegible] and is very much exposed to the cold winds of winter, its only advantage being the close proximity of fine wood; it is too far from the city, being between forty and fifty miles, and will require teams four days to go there and return. I examined another point on the road to Rush Valley, and only about thirty miles from the city, which I consider a much more eligible position. It is in Tooele Valley, three miles to the north of Tooele City, and possesses wood, water, and grass, but is occupied by Mormons; who have some sixty acres under cultivation, with houses and barns on their land. These persons would hardly be disposed to sell, or hardly sell at a fair price, these farms within forty, fifty, or sixty miles of the city, suitable for a military position, that is not occupied by the inhabitants and under cultivation. Finding that I could neither make the purchases ordered, nor strike the greatest determination of the people to resist the authority of the United States, I left the city and returned to my camp on Ham's Fork. On my return I examined the vicinity of Fort Bridger, and found it a very suitable position for wintering the troops and grazing the animals, should it be necessary to stop at that point. The Mormons occupy the fort at present, and also have a settlement about ten miles further up Black's Fork, called Fort Supply. These two places contain buildings sufficient to cover nearly half the troops now on route for Utah, but I was informed that they would all be laid in ashes on the army advancing. I have thus stated fully the result of my visit to Utah, and trusting that my conduct will meet the approval of the Commanding General, I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

STEWART VAN VLIET,
Capt. A. Q. M., U. S. Army.

A Sharp Letter from Brigham Young on Indian Affairs—His Remarks on Southern Conspiracy—Supplying the Troops, &c.

The following is BRIGHAM YOUNG's letter to the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, referred to in our dispatches yesterday. It is sufficiently sharp:

OFFICE OF SUPERINTENDENT OF INDIAN AFFAIRS,
G. S. L. City, Sept. 12, 1857.

SIR: Instead please find abstract account current and vouchers from 1 to 25 inclusive, (also abstract of employes,) for the current quarter up to this date; as, owing to the stoppage of the mail, I have deemed it best to avail myself of the opportunity of sending, by private conveyance, not knowing when I may have another chance. The expenditures as you will observe by the papers, amount to $4,411 32, for which I have drawn my draft on the Department in favor of Hon. JOHN M. BERNHISEL, delegate to Congress from this Territory. You will also observe that a portion of these demands accrued prior to this quarter, which may need a word of explanation. Iron City Cross is in Washington County, the extreme southern county of this Territory, and the labor was commenced and partly performed, seeds, grain, &c., furnished prior to the time that Major ARMSTRONG visited those parts of the Territory; hence failed to find its way into his reports, and failed being included in mine, because the accounts and vouchers were not never brought in, and hence not settled. Until recently, but little has been effected in that part of the Territory at the expense of the Government, although much has been done by the citizens in aiding the Indians with tools and instruction in cultivating the earth. The bands mentioned are parts of the Piede tribe of Indians, who are very numerous, but only in part inhabit this Territory. These Indians are more easily induced to labor than any others in the Territory, and many of them are now engaged in the common pursuits of civilized life. Their requirements are constant for waggons, plows, spades, hoes, teams and harness, &c., to enable them to work to advantage.

In like manner the Indians in Cache Valley have received but little at the expense of the Government, although a sore tax upon the people. Located along the line of the California and Oregon travel, they continue to make their contributions, and, I am sorry to say, with considerable loss of life to the travelers. This is what I have always sought, by all means in my power, to avert, but I find it the most difficult of any portion to control. I have for many years succeeded better than this. I learn, by report, that many of the lives of the emigrants and considerable quantities of property have been taken. This is principally owing to a company of some three or four hundred returning Californians who traveled these roads last Spring to the Eastern States, shooting at every Indian they could see—a practice utterly abhorrent to all good people, yet, I regret to say, one which has been indulged in to a great extent by travelers to and from the Eastern States and California. Hence the Indians regard all white men alike as their enemies, and kill and plunder wherever they can do so with impunity, and often the innocent suffer for the guilty. This has always been one of the greatest difficulties that I have had to contend with in the administration of Indian affairs in this Territory. It is hard to make an Indian believe that the whites are their friends, and the Great Father wishes to do them good, when, perhaps, the very next party which crosses their path shoots them down like wolves.

This trouble with the Indians only exists along the line of travel west, and beyond the influence of our settlements. The Shoshones are not hostile to travelers, so far as they inhabit in this Territory, except, perhaps, a few called "Snake Diggers," who inhabit, as before stated, along the line of travel west of the settlements. There have, however, been more or less depredations the present season north, and more within the vicinity of the settlements, owing to causes above mentioned, and I find it of the utmost difficulty to restrain them. The sound of war quickens the blood and nerves of an Indian.

The report that troops were wending their way to this Territory has also had its influence upon them. In one or two instances, this was the reason assigned why they made the attacks which they did upon some herds of cattle. They seemed to think, if it was to be war, they might as well begin to lay in a supply of food when they had a chance. If I am to have the direction of the Indian Affairs of this Territory, and am expected to maintain friendly relations with the Indians, there are a few things that I would most respectfully suggest to be done.

1. The traders must be made to understand that they have no business to be here. Where over the citizens of this Territory travel the roads they are in the habit of giving the Indians food, tobacco, and a few other presents, and the Indians expect some such trifling favor, and they are emboldened by this practice to come up the road with a view of receiving such presents; when, therefore, travelers from the States make their appearance, they throw themselves in sight with the same view, and when they are shot at, and some of their number killed, as has frequently been the case, we cannot but expect them to wreak their vengeance upon the next company.

2. That the Government should make more liberal appropriations to be expended in presents. I have proven that it is far cheaper to feed and clothe the Indians than to fight them. I find, moreover, that after all, when the fighting is over, it is always followed by extensive presents, which, if properly distributed in the first instance might have averted the fight. In this case, then, the expense of presents is the same, and it is true in nine-tenths of the cases that have happened.

3. The troops must be kept away, for it is a prevalent fact that wherever there are the most of these, we may expect to find the greatest amount of hostile Indians, the least security to persons and property.

If these three items could be complied with, I have no hesitation in saying that, so far as Utah is concerned, travelers could go to and from, pass and repass, and no Indian would disturb or molest them or their property.

In regard to my drafts, it appears that the Department is indisposed to pay them—for what reason I am at a loss to conjecture. I am aware that Congress separated the office of Superintendent of Indian Affairs from that of Governor; that the salary of Governor remained the same for his gubernatorial duties, and that that of the Superintendent was $1,500. I do think that inasmuch as I perform the duties of both offices, that I am entitled to the pay appropriated for both, and trust you will so consider. I have drawn again for the expenditure of the present quarter, as above set forth. Of course, you will do as you please about paying, as you have with the drafts for the two last quarters.

The Department has often manifested its approval of the management of the Indian affairs in this Superintendency, and never its disapproval. Why, then, should I be subjected to such annoyance in regard to obtaining the funds for defraying its expenses? Why should I be denied my salary? Why should appropriations made for the benefit of the Indians of this Territory be retained in the Treasury and individuals left unpaid? These are questions I leave for you to answer at your leisure, and meanwhile submit to such course in relation thereto as you shall see fit to direct.

I have the honor to be, &c., your ob't servant,

BRIGHAM YOUNG,
Governor and ex-officio Superintendent of Indian Affairs, Utah Territory.

Hon. JAMES W. DAVIS, Commissioner Indian Affairs, Washington, D. C.

The Philadelphia Inquirer publishes a letter from a very sincere Mormon, living in Iron County, Utah, whose wife was a Mormon before he married her. He seems to be perfectly contented with the way things are done out there:

"Our religion is truly dear unto us, and we had hoped to find a quiet asylum here, so far from our enemies. We have not troubled others in the rights and the privileges belonging to them, under the Constitution of our country, but the gathering of troops for Utah, and the feelings of the people of the States, indicate that our persecutions are not at an end. My wife believed in the principles of Mormonism (so called) before we were married, and together we cast out in life. Perhaps her friends may say that she has made a poor choice. But we are happy, and the Lord has made a plentiful supply for our wants. We have six children and a comfortable house, although deprived of many of the luxuries of life, in consequence of our isolated position."

Governor Walker on the South—Opinions of the Richmond Enquirer.

[From the Richmond Enquirer.]

THAT Governor WALKER has transcended his official function in submitting his dictum on the Kansas question, we have some doubt, but that he has made an important effort of a statesmanlike kind we have no doubt. It would, however, we think, be premature to form any opinion upon it, without all the facts before us. The provisions of the law quoted by Governor WALKER and Secretary STANTON, or any, in our opinion, very clearly impose them with the responsibility which they have exercised in rejecting the Oxford votes. But on the ground that the returns were in their hands, they may be assumed to have duly made their conduct in a legal, as we have stated, they will at a market, point of view.

Governor WALKER is said to have been appointed yesterday to succeed Governor GEORGE. It will, therefore, be impossible for our readers and we will be recalled. If it is proved that the rejection of the Oxford returns was a mere pretext, prompted by a sense of duty and of justice, the rejection of the Oxford returns was a mere pretext, prompted by a sense of duty and of justice, the Pro-Slavery strength in the Legislature would, nevertheless, be sufficient to carry the election of popular sovereignty, to the letter and spirit of the Nebraska Kansas bill, to justice and [illegible] fraudulent votes to be received. The Kansas question is not settled.

The Secretary, [illegible] WALKER has injured their interests in [illegible] the Administration will not hesitate to remove [illegible] the [illegible] Government, which [illegible] criminal policy of long standing [illegible] in favor of the Free-Soilers [illegible] a proclamation [illegible] they will respect the [illegible]

ANOTHER FAMILY SCANDAL.

Murder Committed by the Husband of the Victim—Disreputable Story of Crime.

The tragedy which occurred at the St. Lawrence Hotel in Philadelphia on Wednesday afternoon, in which Mr. Benjamin Carson, President of the Atlantic Bank at Tamaqua, Penn., was killed by one Thomas Wyncoop, first appeared in the morning papers. Some, it appears, a year since, one Miss McCauley, of Wilmington, Del., had married a man, who, after marriage, said his wife was pregnant by another man, and that the parties had been guilty of criminal intercourse while the woman was still a young lady at boarding-school. On Wednesday, Carson called upon Carson at the St. Lawrence Hotel, in Philadelphia, a fashionable establishment, and after an angry conversation, ended by stabbing Carson with a bowie-knife. Four balls entered Carson's body, killing him instantly. Carson was a married man.

The Philadelphia Bulletin gives the past history of the parties, as follows:

Carson was a native Englishman by birth, and when he first came to Schuylkill County, some years ago, began to work as a miner. He saved money, and finally went into the business of a peddler, and became a large dealer in hardware, with a store in Tamaqua. He married a lady of Philadelphia, to whom he has been married twenty-five years, and they have never had any children. A few years ago he became acquainted with a Miss Jane McCauley, residing in Sassafras Cottage, where he was in the habit of spending his leisure hours. At the school, Miss McCauley was understood to be a very fast girl. It is presumed that a guilty intimacy then existed between the parties, of which Mr. Carson was at all times, as yet, entirely ignorant.

About two years ago, and while Miss McCauley was still at school, Carson became acquainted with Mr. Wyncoop, who was a teacher of a school in Wilmington, Del., but also a native of the Keystone State. Wyncoop became acquainted with Miss McCauley, at Wilmington, Del., but discovered, after marriage, that

[illegible] FOR COMMERCIAL [illegible] in [illegible] Paper, [illegible] per [illegible] per [illegible] per

FRIDAY, Nov. 6—P. M.

The Stock market continues firm, and a further advance was had to-day on most descriptions, to the extent of ¼@1 ⅌ cent. The improvement in the road shares and also in State Stocks has been very general, and the orders at the Board are unusually well distributed. The speculation in New-York Central is, perhaps, the most important in the magnitude of the daily transactions, although quite as large a demand was shown to-day for Reading shares. The highest fraction reached by the former was 73¼ ⅌ cent.; for the latter 80 ⅌ cent. Rock Island touched 71¼, Galena 79, Michigan Southern Preferred 80, Delaware 96, Virginia 6s 84, Panama 77, and Erie 14½. At the afternoon session of the Brokers a fair amount of business was done, but the market not quite so buoyant as in the forenoon. The Bears is mostly equally divided on the movement for the advance in prices, and the contest is particularly spirited in New-York Central. It is stated in a morning paper that the sellers against the rise are offering the February dividend at three ⅌ cent. instead of four. Of course, this is a mere wager for effect. There is nothing in the condition of the road, its traffic, or its scale of operating expenses, (recently cut down,) to authorize the rumor or expectation of diminished half-yearly dividends. The difference between a gross annual traffic of six and a half millions in 1856, and eight millions in 1857, is only a question of contingent surplus. The dividends have been uniformly 8 ⅌ cent. a year ever since consolidation. The demand for Reading was principally from Philadelphia, where, it is stated, propositions have been made for funding the pressing liabilities of the Company. The inquiry for State Stocks is a very steady one, and principally for investment here, and on orders from abroad.

The Baltic, of the Collins line, is the Liverpool steamer for Saturday. The business in Exchange for this opportunity was principally at 109 @109 ⅌ cent., 60 day bills, and some Gold sovereigns have been bought in lieu of the higher figures demanded for sight bills. The shipment will be about $200,000. The Gold due to-night from the Canada, at Boston, if in English Coin, will probably return immediately by the Persia, to sail direct on Wednesday next, as it is not wanted here at present, and the supply of American Coin is more than equal to the demand for transmission to the Cotton ports. The inquiry for Exchange at or near the Specie rate is not large, but owing to the backwardness in the Cotton movement, the selection of first-class bills is narrowed to a few names on the spot. The Canadian drawers were holding to-day for 109 ⅌ cent. The Money market is without important change, and the Bank movement in the way of discounts this week favors an increased line of accommodation. The Brokers quote Gold 100¼@100½ buyers, 100¾@101 sellers. As much as $4 85 was paid for sovereigns to-day. Philadelphia funds 95@96 ⅌ cent.

It having been decided that the Bowery Bank will go into liquidation, N. G. BRADFORD, Esq., the late Cashier, has retired from the office of Receiver in favor of Mr. JOHN A. SEWARD, the Secretary of the United States Trust Company.

The following is to-day's business at the office of the Assistant Treasurer: Receipts, $191,528; payments, $291,846; balance, $5,568,994. The receipts include $44,000 from Customs. The payments include $60,500 California drafts.

A defalcation of $50,000 or $60,000 is reported in the Grocers' Bank of this City, now in the course of liquidation.

The Pacific Mail Company have declared a half-yearly dividend of 10 ⅌ cent., payable on the 11th inst. We understand the surplus earnings of the half year would have justified even 15 ⅌ cent.

The Canada's mail from Europe to Saturday, Oct. 24, was received at our Post-Office late this afternoon, viâ Boston. In another place we have copied the reports of the London press on the advance in the rate of discount by the Bank of England, and other movements in the London money Market. The return of the Bank for the week ending the 17th October, gives the following results when compared with the previous week:

Public Deposits	£4,833,021	Decrease £2,569,965
Other Deposits	11,123,491	Increase 1,453,308
Rest	3,222,817	Decrease 732,471
Gov't Securities	10,254,341	Decrease 308,066
Other Securities	20,254,265	Decrease 4,500,915
Notes unemployed	3,217,185	Decrease 607,215

The amount of notes in circulation is £21,153,245, being an increase of £1,193,195, and the stock of bullion in both departments is £9,524,478, showing a decrease of £585,462, when compared with the preceding return.

The following table will show the fluctuations in Consols since the 16th inst.:

In regard to American Stocks Messrs. BARING BROTHERS write:

Non-convertible Bonds, 75@77; Freeland Bonds, 84@86; Michigan Central Bonds, 76@78; Shares, 44; New-York Central 6 ⅌ cent. In State Stocks, buyers of Maryland at 90; of Massachusetts Fives Sterling at 97. Pennsylvania Inscriptions of Loans at 12; Bonds, 75¼@76¼; Virginia Sixes Dollars, 80@82; Canada Sterling, 106@108½.

Our regular correspondents, Messrs. ROBERT BERNOU & Co., write as follows:

LONDON, Friday, Oct. 23, 1857.

We have to report a further rise on Monday last, the 19th inst., in the Bank of England rate of discount from 7 to 8 ⅌ cent. upon receipt of the news by the Canada, quoting the exchange of New-York on England at about 100@102, and consequently showing a large profit upon the exportation of specie from this country. Notwithstanding the uncertainty as to whether there may be a further rise in the rates for money, the demand for discount this week has not been very excessive, and in some few instances the rates have been rather under the Bank of England. On the other hand, the rates obtainable for loans on Government Securities continue moderate, and money has been comparatively abundant on the Stock Exchange. Since the departure of the Baltic, on the 14th inst., the exports of specie by the succeeding steamers, exclusive of the present conveyance, are reported to amount to about £250,000. In our last circular we quoted Consols 88¼@88½ for money, and 88⅞ for the 16th November. On the following day they advanced a little, but again receded upon the raising of the rate of discount by the Bank of England on Monday. They have since recovered, and we now quote them 88¼@88½ for money and 88⅞@89 for the account. English Securities generally have not fluctuated much in price. A considerable business has been done in American Securities during the past week, but at rather lower prices. Transactions have taken place in Illinois Central 7 ⅌ cent. Construction Bonds at 76@77; 76; the shares at [illegible] New-York and Erie 7 ⅌ cent. Mortgage Bonds at [illegible] and the Shares at 65@64. Michigan Central Bonds of 1860 at 79@80@79¾, and the shares at 44; and Michigan Southern and Northern Indiana Sinking Fund Bonds at 80, ex coupon. State Massachusetts Sterling Bonds are reported to have been dealt in at 96 ⅌ cent. In Manchester there is an absence of demand for both Yarn and Cloth, which seems likely to lead to a resort to short time. The feverish feeling which prevailed in commercial circles owing to the mass of failures, has in some measure subsided. The sales of Cotton in Liverpool for the week will amount to about 21,000 bales; transactions low, and of a retail character; prices irregular, and in some instances ⅛@¼ lower. Our Corn market continues dull, and prices generally rather weaker. We quote American Wheat: white, [illegible]; red, [illegible], ⅌ quarter. The Flour just arrived from Canada is offered at 28s.@34s. ⅌ barrel. Indian Corn steady; mixed, [illegible]; yellow, 29s.; pure white, 30s. ⅌ 480 lbs. Linseed Cakes support prices. American this evening, in barrels, £11 10s.; barrels, £10 10s. ⅌ ton. New American Cloverseed night nominal about 70s. ⅌ cwt. In Rails there have been few transactions, and we continue to quote them as the day's meeting bill.

ROBT. BERNOU & CO.

Mr. E. Y. SATTERTHWAITE, Broker in American stocks, writes from London after the receipt of the mail from this side to 7th October:

Notwithstanding the very disastrous character of the advices from America, (product of the Reading failures of CARMAN & Co., Child, Hicks & Co., and others,) being the worst yet received, there has been a disposition to invest at the low rates now current. The supply of Stock is limited from the non-execution of many orders in New-York, owing to the inability of parties there to negotiate exchange for the purchase of Stock. For this reason prices here are maintained at an immense advance over the current quotations in New-York. Illinois Central shares are down at 6 ⅌ cent. discount, and are reported this ⅌ cent. discount by telegraph from New-York. Construction Bonds have found free buyers at 76 to 77, being considerably higher than the last quotation. Erie shares have brought 16, against 14 at New-York. Bonds of 1871 have brought 86, against 82 at New-York. Bonds of 1883, 78, against 70 to 68 at New-York. New-York Central shares 64, against 57 at New-York. Erie Bonds show very nearly with only moderate transactions. Consols for money 88¼ to ⅞; for account, 88⅞ to ⅞.

The Dry Goods Import for the week is $555,646, against $1,150,576 the week ending Nov. 5, last year. The following is the summary:

Cincinnati Money Market.

From Harrison & Holmes' Circular, Oct. 23.

Within the last week there has been a decided improvement in the feeling of the money market. Gold, after having sold as high as 10 ⅌ cent. premium immediately after the suspension of the New-York banks, has steadily declined to 4 ⅌ cent. Exchange on New-York is also in better supply at 5 ⅌ cent. premium, which is now the extreme rate at which it can be sold.

A more active and generous demand has sprung up, at slightly better prices, for flour and grain. The pork season is almost opening with a more active demand than could reasonably have been expected two weeks since. It is now believed by well-informed circles, that there will be ample funds here from abroad to buy at fair prices all the hogs that will be brought to this market. These facts have created a more cheerful and hopeful tone in commercial circles, and infused more activity in business. Money is, however, exceedingly scarce, and discounts out of the question; but the creation of new credit, even to a slight degree, is daily unlocking small amounts of money which have been hid away since the commencement of the revulsion; if, therefore, we can pass along for a few days without any additional disasters, we may look for more decided relief in all departments of trade.

In Stocks the business has necessarily been small, but in the last few days we have had a more extensive inquiry for first-class railroad securities. These inquiries are in some instances from parties who ten days since could not be induced to entertain an offer at exceedingly low prices for our best securities. In the last three or four days we have effected sales of Little Miami 6 ⅌ cent. Bonds at 75; Hamilton and Dayton 2d Mortgage 7s at 78; Covington and Lexington 2d Mortgages at 55; Ohio and Mississippi 2d Mortgages at 46. Also, 100 shares Little Miami Stock at 75; 30 of Hamilton and Dayton at 80, and 100 shares Farmers' Bank of Kentucky at par. These sales indicate a more healthy and confident tone than our market has exhibited for several weeks. Thus far, other securities than those named are without demand; but, as confidence increases, we expect other securities will be called for, to which, in the absence of actual transactions, we are unable to extend our quotations.

From the Boston Daily Advertiser.

RAILWAY PROPERTY.—We copied into our paper of Monday last, under the financial head, some well-considered remarks from the New-York TIMES, upon the present condition of three or four of the leading railway companies which have been forced by the pressure of the times, to suspend the payment of their present obligations. We hope that these remarks were generally observed, for we believe that the view of the case there presented would convince the New-England stockholders of these companies that it will be in all respects unwise for them to dispose of their stock at the present market rates. They cannot but see that it is greatly for their advantage to make a slight exertion to remove the temporary embarrassments of the companies in which they are interested, and thus preserve a property of great intrinsic value from unnecessary sacrifice.

In the case of the Michigan Central Railroad, a plan has been proposed by which the stockholders may do this with hope, and with perfect safety. The advertisement of this company invites a loan, under an arrangement by which a sinking fund will be provided to meet the new bonds at maturity—the company agreeing to pay the fund into the hands of trustees in such yearly installments as will amount to a sum considerably more than the par value of the whole issue of bonds. The terms of payment are likewise made easy, and it seems altogether probable that before any considerable part of the subscriptions will become payable, the general financial aspect throughout the country will have become brighter, and business will have so far settled into its usual channel that money will pass about more freely.

There is no good foundation for a distrust of solid railroad securities. Manufacturing stocks are now generally without profit, and even bank stocks feel the commercial distress. We must exercise discretion and discrimination, not in accepting or rejecting particular classes of investments, but in selecting in each and every class what is substantial and well secured. We do not hesitate to suggest with confidence to business men, that a bond with a sinking fund more than ample to pay it at maturity, secured by a first mortgage upon a railroad so well constructed and so prosperous as the Michigan Central, which, from its position, must always command an extensive traffic, is an investment which deserves the attention, not only of the shareholders in the company, but also of capitalists who desire to employ their funds in a permanent, safe and profitable manner.
